The origins of the word

Merriam-Webster SINCE 1828

Manifesto Has Latin Roots

Noun

Manifesto is related to manifest, which occurs in English as a noun, verb, and adjective. Of these, the adjective, which means "readily perceived by the senses" or "easily recognized," is oldest, dating to the 14th century. Both manifest and manifesto derive ultimately from the Latin noun manus ("hand") and -festus, a combining form that is related to the Latin adjective infestus, meaning "hostile." Something that is manifest is easy to perceive or recognize, and a manifesto is a statement in which someone makes his or her intentions or views easy for people to ascertain. Perhaps the most famous statement of this sort is the Communist Manifesto, written in 1848 by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels to outline the platform of the Communist League.

Creating your Manifesto

Sacred Inquiry for Creating your Manifesto

- What do I believe?
- How do I want to act?
- How do I want to be treated? And treat others?
- What words have meaning to me?
- How do I identify myself, and others
- Your Manifesto creates resonance….and informs your purpose

Consider the "origin" of thought.

Tips for your Manifesto…

- There is no “right or wrong” way
- Explore in your journal, your planning processes, your creative time
- Experiment with different applications, intentions, experiences
  - for yourself
  - for others
  - for the collective

Your manifesto will include a deep remembering of what, and who, you really are.
