

Money & Private Practice

Check with an accountant. I don't know your tax situation & am not an accountant.

Profit First is a great, non-boring book about business finance. Because our overhead is so much lower than most businesses, I find the amount recommended for overhead is a bit too much. Check out Money Nuts and Bolts, founded by Linzy Bonham, a therapist in private practice. She adapts some of the tenants of profit first & her head for finances into great free & paid resources for the "how do I do this" part of private practice finances.

If you need help with money mindset & with building your practice, check out the Inner Circle. My team & I really get to dig in with you.

The Abundance Party has a supportive community, trainings, & courses about money & private practice.

If your practice is where you want it in all ways except money, check out Tiffany McLain's free training The 4 Step Framework to Raise Your Fees.

Also check out and say Lindsay Bryan Podvin at Mind Money Balance. She also has a great Instagram account.
