

So how did I go from that to writing and drawing an illustrated newsletter?

current logo has grey hair - even though I have brown hair.
Artistic license?

Great Things

Over time, I built up a lot of evidence that following my intuition works out well for me. The more I gently offered this evidence to my doubtful mind (without arguing with it), the more open to my intuition my mind became.

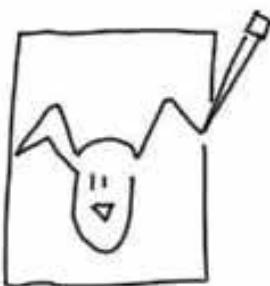

So when I saw a drawing course advertised online & got the familiar quiet inner nudge to buy it, I was super surprised. But I didn't question it.

Here are some of the amazing things that have happened as a direct result of me following the intuitive feeling to purchase that course (even though buying it made no sense to my mind).

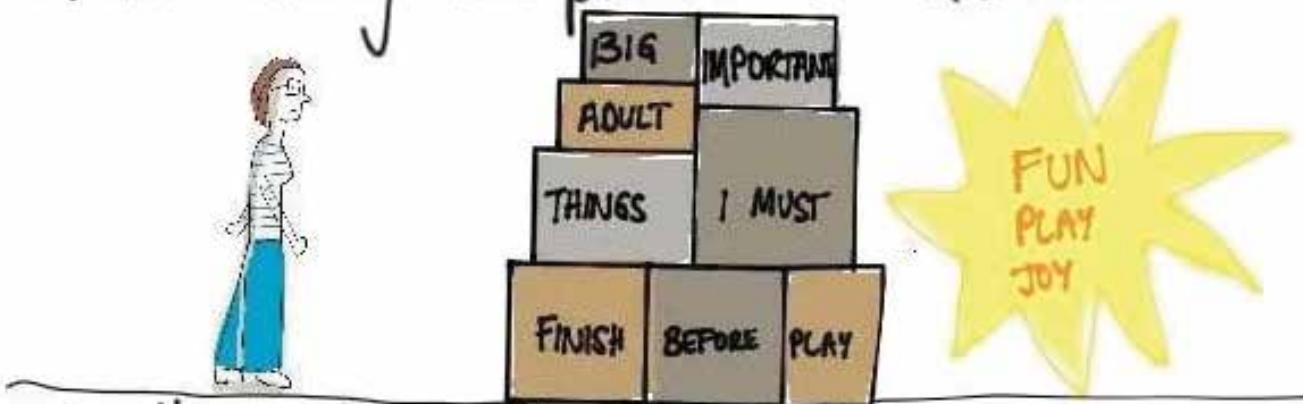

1. I LOVE drawing

2. I've updated my perception of myself. Not only do I now think of myself as creative, I now think of myself as an illustrator. An artist!

3. Adding the drawing aspect to my work helps me to connect to my heart and to access more of the fun playfulness that's missing from the lives of so many responsible adults.

4. I've become so much more observant. I used to be pretty unaware of my environment. But as I practice drawing, I'm learning to look and see differently.
More deeply.

But now that my mind + intuition work together, no one is exhausted, everyone is included and we are all so much more open to magic + unexpected adventures.

Until VERY recently, I thought of myself as "someone who can't draw".

